

ASIAN CULTURAL ENGAGEMENT CENTER

AT VIRGINIA TECH®

ACE Center's Statement of Purpose

The Asian Cultural Engagement Center (ACEC) is in the division of the Cultural and Community Centers under the Virginia Tech Office for Inclusion and Diversity. The ACEC's mission is to advocate for the Asian Pacific Islander Desi American (APIDA) communities, including Virginia Tech faculty, staff, undergraduate and graduate students, and alumni. We also aim to educate the campus community on issues centered around or related to our communities. All members of the campus and the local community are welcome to the ACEC and can participate in the ACEC's events, programs, and activities.

Undergraduate Student Spotlight: Maggie Luo

Maggie Luo is a sophomore majoring in Human Nutrition Food and Exercise and minoring in Public Health. She currently holds many leadership positions including: Vice President for the Asian American Mental Health Alliance (AAMHA) and for the Chinese American Society (CAS). In her CAS role, she felt a responsibility to her community, as she was previously the Freshman Representative last year and wanted to make the organization better by contributing to its growth. Moreover, she wanted CAS to become more inclusive. Also, her impetus for joining CAS was because past CAS Officers inspired her to become an Officer too. Regarding AAMHA, Luo chose to become Vice President because the organization has similar values that she does. Since AAMHA is a new student organization, its President, Yullie Kwak chose Luo to be the Vice President because the president trusted Luo could handle the position. The overall reason that Luo ran for these leadership positions is because she wanted to be more involved with the APIDA community.

In addition to her roles in these student organizations, Luo has kept busy by starting her online thrift store this past summer on Instagram. Peachiru (the name of her online thrift store) started off with Luo having way too many clothes in her closet, and during quarantine, she noticed that the majority of the items were very nice and could be sold instead of donated. When Luo started this venture, friends would ask if she could sell their clothes as well. Originally, she marketed women's clothes; however, recently, there are men's clothes being sold too!! The majority of Luo's proceeds go to different charities and she encourages those who ask her to sell their clothes to donate their proceeds as well. Currently, she has sold 260 items, donated around $600, of which a majority of the proceeds went to organizations that support BLM, COVID-19 support services, and other social justice organizations. Peachiru Customs became a branch of Luo's on-line thrift store, which sells custom shoes. Basically, customers would tell Luo their shoe sizes and desired designs. Design prices would range from $20-40, not including the actual price of the shoe. Working on her entrepreneurial endeavors is mainly a hobby, as school and extracurricular activities have been keeping Luo busy. She encourages everyone to thrift instead of shop first-hand since it is better for the environment and because the majority of the time clothes that are bought is considered fast fashion (fads), so it's better to thrift. Besides, the items tend to be cheaper!

If Luo had to give any tips to her past self, it would be, "Trust in the process of learning. You have a lifetime to learn things. In the past, I had anxiety for not being good/smart enough compared to all other peers. Over time, I learned how to learn. College is very different from high school where high school structures everything for you while [in] college you have more of a choice on how to learn. But also, you have to put the [in the] effort. You will not be able to learn without any effort! College has a lot of resources, you just have to find [them] and reach out first. Also, [professor's] office hours are really helpful! Take advantage!"

Organization Spotlight: The Chinese American Society (CAS)

The Chinese American Society (CAS) at Virginia Tech is a social and cultural student organization that aims to introduce and promote Chinese culture to the general student body and local community. Additionally, CAS strives to emphasize diversity and raise awareness of what it means to be an Asian-American living in modern times. They recently hosted their Big/Little Program in which incoming students joining the club are partnered up with returning members to create closer bonds with new people. Some events that the members always look forward to include ChinaVAsion which is an intercollegiate event with University of Virginia (UVA), William and Mary (W&M), and Virginia Commonwealth University (VCU) and during which everyone comes together to connect. Another event is a culture show that happens in the spring semester and with the culture show, all the members get to celebrate their culture through dance, fashion and more! With COVID-19 all events will probably be held virtually for safety precautions. For more information, please contact cas.virginiatech@gmail.com, Michelle Hong at michellehong@vt.edu, or Maggie Luo at mhluo@vt.edu.

Graduate Student Spotlight: Joong Won Kim

Joong Won Kim is a Korean-American Ph.D. candidate in the Department of Sociology and the incoming Graduate Programming Assistant for the ACEC. His dissertation research focuses on looking at ways that the U.S. racial ideology becomes transnationally disseminated and promulgated with Korea as the extension of the U.S. empire. His dissertation focuses on how a transnational racial order is "done" and "accomplished" in everyday social interactions through the use of language. His work can be found in academic peer-reviewed journals such as Sociological Inquiry, American Behavioral Scientist, Sociation, and Sustainability.

Kim immigrated to the U.S. from Korea at the age of 11 and grew up in Illinois, north of Chicago. Before coming to Virginia Tech, Kim received his Master's of Arts in Sociology from DePaul University. Additionally, he received his Bachelor of Arts in Sociology from Southern Illinois University with a minor in Philosophy. A fun fact about Kim is that he loves Chicago's Deep Dish Pizza and the Vermont jamband, Phish.

As the incoming Graduate Programming Assistant for the ACEC, Kim is looking forward to putting into practice some of the ideas that are very much discussed in scholarship to the community at Virginia Tech. He is very excited to engage with the enthusiasm of the Hokie culture and family through his role at the ACEC.

“One piece of advice I have is self-care. As a sociologist, I can't stress enough the importance of social well-being; being with your peer network and family. When you're isolated and detached from society, it has drastically negative consequences - particularly with regards to mental health. I think organizations such as the Asian American Mental Health Alliance (AAMHA) are very important with regards to something that is very needed - social cohesion, a sense of community in these tumultuous times.”

Alumni Spotlight: Dennis Wang

Dennis Wang, '98, is a Virginia Tech Industrial Systems and Engineering alumn of Taiwanese descent. During his time at Virginia Tech, he was a member of the Corps of Cadets, in which he made some of his closest friends. He also acquired a Master's degree in Information Technology from Carnegie Mellon in 2004.

Although he began his career in manufacturing with the corporation, Cutler Hammer–Eaton, his career took a turn towards Mutual Funds management, and then through various roles in Banking. Currently, Wang is a Product Manager for Fiserv, the largest financial technology company in the world.

Wang is an active member of the ACEC's APIDA Discussion Board on Hokie Mentorship Connect, where he hopes to learn about what other APIDA Virginia Tech alumni are doing and how he can help the community, students, and other alumni. He said he advocates for the APID Alumni Society members to be more vocal and confident.

“My desire is to have the people that are participating as well as the generation that's within the school right now to feel confident that they can actually be a vocal part of society,” Wang said. “We fit into many stereotypes I would say, but at the same time, a lot of the conversations don't usually involve us from an Asian perspective.”

Given his various roles including those from the Engineering/Technical background to Mutual Funds and Asset Management, to Banking, Wang has a myriad of experiences to offer to the APIDA community at Virginia Tech. For students, alumni, or other community members who would like to contact Wang for advice or just to meet him, you can email him at denniswang@gmail.com.

Faculty Spotlight: Interview with Dr. Shaila Mehra

Academic and Professional Bio:

Dr. Shaila Mehra (she/her) is the Assistant Dean for Diversity, Equity, and Inclusion in the College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences at Virginia Tech and a second-generation Indian (South Asian - Desi) American from St. Louis, MO. She earned undergraduate degrees in English and Art from Rhodes College and a Ph.D. in Literature from the University of Rochester. Her research and teaching focus on African American literature, Black feminist theory, and Black intellectual traditions. She was previously Director of Africana Studies at Oklahoma State University. Prior to entering academia, she worked in community-based grantmaking and nonprofit management in St. Louis. A recent transplant to Virginia, she is grateful for natural beauty and welcoming colleagues, and she hopes the weather treats all of us kindly.

Acclimating to Blacksburg:

Blacksburg is gorgeous. I spent the whole summer outdoors, something that is impossible to do in Oklahoma. Now I'm watching the leaves change on mountain ridges that I can see from my front door. I really can't believe I live in such a beautiful place. I'm also thrilled to be at Virginia Tech. It feels like a time of possibility related to the work I do; there's strong leadership at all levels, an openness to new ideas, and terrific colleagues. This is also a place where I believe I will thrive intellectually, thanks to the robust intellectual environment that the faculty and the CCC Directors create through programming, visiting speakers, etc. I attend talks and events such as webinars weekly, where I learn about new research in critical race, ethnic, and gender studies that absolutely informs the administrative and institutional change work I am doing.

Notable Quotes:

"Virginia Tech is a really complex organization...[and what I like doing is] navigating organizations and figuring out how to work with like-minded people and people who share the same priorities as me...to leverage our power [and] the university's resources to accomplish what we want - which is a university that not only reflects the diversity of this country and this region, but also centers knowledges that have for the most part been marginalized in academia."

"The College of Liberal Arts and Human Sciences is the place within the academy where those marginalized knowledge production fields have had the most salient impact on how people get trained now. And one of the things that we need to do is to make sure that, in my College, the faculty represent ... cutting edge or emergent ... methods and interdisciplinary training rooted in the critical analysis of race, class, gender, ethnicity, nationality, religion.... [Additionally,] that's addressing the structural piece ... meaning structural or procedural impediments. "
